The Carnegie Restoration and Preservation Project Public Workshop

The grand Carnegie Building, once a crown jewel in Alameda's downtown, remains vacant and has been closed to the public for nearly ten years. With each year that the Carnegie remains closed, the threat of the historic building's deterioration grows. The Carnegie Restoration and Preservation Project will maintain the building's interior and exterior historic architectural integrity by restoring windows, doors, and other elements to their original design.

The City of Alameda has contracted with Muller and Caulfield Architects to lead a public process to determine how the Carnegie Building will be used in the future. The community is invited attend the first of two Carnegie Restoration and Preservation Project Workshops at the Carnegie Building, 2260 Santa Clara Avenue, on August 30, 2007, from 6:00 to 8:00 pm. The Carnegie Building will be open and available for tours from 5:00 to 6:00 pm prior to the workshop.

Please contact Greg McFann, Project Manager, at (510) 747-6820 (M-TH), gmcfann@ci.alameda.ca.us, or Cathy Woodbury, Planning and Building Director, at (510) 747-6800, cwoodbury@ci.alameda.ca.us, for more information.
